introduction

I bridge the gap between hard tech and creative media. Whether I'm engineering a new project or editing a cinematic sequence, I bring a business perspective to everything I do. I make sure the technology works, the visuals stun, and the concept sells.

first ever project

At 18, I competed in an entrepreneurship competition at IIT Kanpur, where I spent three months learning from industry professionals. I developed a comprehensive business plan, designed a detailed Lean Canvas, and pitched to a panel of investors. The experience was a crash course in real-world business strategy, finance, and the art of selling a vision under pressure.

I pitched 'GUIDE EDGE' a platform designed to professionalize content creation through structured, bite-sized courses taught by top creators. My plan included revenue from course sales and exclusive sessions with influencers like Bhuvan Bam. The market has since validated this exact model: Ankur Warikoo's 'WebVeda' later executed a similar concept to great success, proving the viability of the vision I had back then.

what i bring

01. BUSINESS: The Strategist

Trained at IIT Kanpur’s TiE program. I don't just guess—I develop market-ready business models, ensuring every creative idea is built on solid financial logic and real demand

02. DESIGN: The Anti-Algorithm

This Is Not AI. I reject the generic. Using Photoshop & Illustrator, I engineer textured, human-first visuals that automated tools simply can’t replicate

03. MARKETING: The Growth Engine

A pretty image is useless if it doesn't sell. I focus on retention and positioning—turning passive viewers into an active, engaged community.

IN ACTION: BUDDTHEORY

Currently applying this full-stack approach to architect Buddtheory’s (the business I am working with) entire visual identity and market voice.
